SWARMS OF RAF BOMBERS HAMMER FRENCH COAST

Boulogne and Other Areas Are Bombed for Ten Hours

COVER MANY MILES

Raids Are Carried Out On The Seventh Successive Night

By Frank Butler

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

DOVER, England, June 18—(INS)—

Unleashing their heaviest raid so far on the French "invasion coast," swarms of R. A. F. bombers hammered Boulogne and other areas for ten hours last night and early today.

The punishing raid marked the seventh successive night of R. A. F. attacks on targets along the French coast and in Western Germany.

Boulogne appeared to be the chief objective, but the raiders dropped their bombs over a region covering many miles.

Watchers on the English coast pointed out that Boulogne has been attacked incessantly since Monday afternoon.

(Editor's note: While the coastal attack was in progress, other R. A. F. planes resumed their attacks on targets in Western Germany. At the same time German raiders carried out night assaults on Britain. A British Air Ministry spokesman, however, said the German activity was on a small scale and confined chiefly to the east coast, where a few casualties and some damage were caused.)

(A Berlin announcement stated that British planes penetrated western Germany during the night and dropped incendiary and explosive bombs chiefly on residential areas, causing some damage. The announcement added that anti-aircraft fire quickly forced the R. A. F. raiders to turn back.)

Many squadrons of British bombers participated in the night-long sweep of the German-held French coast, racing across the Channel continuously to drop their deadly cargoes of bombs. Some estimates said as many as 200 bombers participated in the smashing attack.

Authorities indicated 13 German fighting planes had been shot down and 10 British fighters lost during the offensive sweep, which resulted in furious aerial combats over the Channel.

In addition to the "invasion ports," the raids were directed against enemy shipping in the Channel and objectives in Northern France.

Many squadrons of fighting planes escorted the bombers which lashed at the entire French coastline from Boulogne to Calais.

Tons of high explosives were dropped on targets across the water and the violent explosions could be heard on the southeast English coast. Buildings in Kent shook from the vibration caused by the blasts.

I stood on the Dover Cliffs and watched the R. A. F. planes take command of the air over the Straits.

As the bomb bursts rumbled in the distance, scores of British fighting planes patrolled up and down the

May Join Bucks County With Montgomery County

According to newspaper dispatches out of Harrisburg, it is stated that "Republican legislative leaders, at the request of their Congressmen, have agreed to accept the Democratic reapportionment bill and avoid an at-large election next year, it was reported today.

"By accepting the Democratic proposal, the Republicans would legislate out of existence the Congressional seat now held by Charles L. Gerlach, one of their party members from Allentown.

"The Democratic plan calls for elimination of the present Bucks-Lehigh district by adding Bucks county to the present Montgomery county district and Lehigh county to the present Berks county district."

LOCAL BOARDS TO HANDLE REGISTRATION

Estimates 65,773 Men Will Be Registered In The State On July 1st

EXPECT NO DIFFICULTY

Selective Service local boards of Pennsylvania are expected on July 1st to conduct the second registration of young men eligible for military training without requiring the assistance of outside agencies, Dr. William Mather Lewis, Selective Service Director for Pennsylvania, advised Governor Arthur H. James today.

While various organizations not a part of the Selective Service System helped in the first registration on October 16, 1940, Dr. Lewis said that as the second registration will be much smaller, local board members and clerks are expected to handle it without difficulty.

Estimates by the Bureau of the Census in Washington indicate that about 65,773 men will be registered in Pennsylvania on July 1st. Men who have become 21 years of age since October 16th will be required to register.

"The majority of young men affected," Dr. Lewis said, "will be registered at the local board headquarters in the community in which they live. In the event, however, that local board offices are so situated that it would be difficult for the registration to be conducted there without hardship to the registrants, other public buildings may be used with permission of State Headquarters, providing that there is no expense to Selective Service or the Government."

Also, the Director said, where unusual circumstances exist, local boards are authorized to enlist volunteers for the actual registration.

He said:

"When the first registration was conducted last October 16th, many organizations outside the Selective Service System gave us their wholehearted assistance, for which we are grateful. However, National Headquarters of the Selective Service System, and this State Headquarters, believe that our own local boards can conduct the second registration on July 1st as ordered by the President."

Registration will be conducted between the hours of seven a. m. and nine p. m., Dr. Lewis pointed out. He urged men subject to registration to register, if possible with the local boards in their home communities—the local boards which will have jurisdiction over them.

Last October, men registered wherever they happened to be and, as a result, thousands of transfers of registration cards were necessary in order to bring registrants under their proper jurisdiction. Dr. Lewis said it will be to the advantage of both the local boards and the registrants if this condition is avoided on July 1st.

He made it plain, however, that if a man who is subject to registration is away from his home community on Registration Day, and returning to his home would be a hardship, he may register at any local board office.

Doesn't Want Conn As A Son-in-Law

Pittsburgh, June 18—There was one Conn fight fan in Pittsburgh today who was ready to take a poke at Billy, "champion or no champion," if the heavyweight challenger goes through with plans—to marry his daughter.

The irate parent who wants to see Billy win the title but not part of his family is James L. Smith, former big league baseball star and father of Mary Louise Smith, 18. According to the registrar of Jefferson county, Billy and Miss Smith made out a marriage application on May 28th.

Mayor and Four Councilmen Are Found Guilty

Media, June 18—Clifford H. Peoples, ousted as mayor of Chester by court decree, and four Chester councilmen, today were found guilty of malfeasance and misdemeanor in office by a Delaware county jury of six men and six women.

The charges were covered in an indictment, which accused the five city officials of naming themselves members of the Chester Municipal Authority, with an accompanying annual increase of $1,200 in salary.

The jury, however, found the defendants not guilty of malfeasance and non-feasance in connection with the authority's purchase of the Chester Water Service Company for $6,000,000. The Commonwealth charged a private profit of $625,000 was realized through the deal, with $250,000 divided by former State Senator McClure and his associates. Peoples and the councilmen received none of the alleged private profit.

The conviction makes removal of the councilmen from office mandatory. They are subject to $1,000 fines each and maximum terms of two years' imprisonment. Sentence was deferred by Judge Schull pending disposition of new trial motions which were filed immediately by defense attorneys.

Those convicted with Peoples are: Edward D. McLaughlin, who resigned from Chester council last month, and Councilmen William P. Lear, John T. Ross and William J. McDowell.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Nearing The Brink

Washington, June 17.

BEFORE this is printed the United States may have sent its official protest to Germany concerning the sinking of the Robin Moor.

However, it now seems accepted generally that that will not furnish the "incident" for which it was said the President was waiting before putting the American Navy into full co-operation with the British to end the submarine menace and win the Battle of the Atlantic.

THE note from this Government to Germany, which is expected any day, is certain to be a stern and unequivocal indictment of (from our standpoint) a brutal, unprovoked and indefensible act. For the moment, it is overshadowed by the President's action in closing the German consulates and ordering from the country the small army of German nationals who were using their diplomatic connection to spread propaganda "inimical to this country." But that action is in no way connected with the Moor affair. On the contrary, it had been under consideration for weeks, and the President would have been fully justified in acting a long time ago. It will not affect, one way or the other, the Robin Moor protest.

IN that note, it is believed, there will be no mincing of words. The protest will be in tune with the recent blunt and belligerent utterances and acts of the President, Mr. Hull, Mr. Knox, Mr. Welles and other Administration spokesmen who have given forth on the American attitude. But there will be no action beyond a threatening protest. At least this is the view of the best-informed of our State Department officials. And it would have been

"Ziegfeld Girl" Offers An Exceptionally Great Cast

Hollywood has assembled its finest array of talent to give the public its greatest screen entertainment! James Stewart, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner and Tony Martin—plus one hundred of the most beautiful girls in America—plus brilliant new song hits—plus settings unrivaled for their lavish beauty—plus Adrian's most imaginative and style-awakening costumes—all this in one picture—"Ziegfeld Girl," coming to the Grand Theatre.

Based on an original story by William Anthony McGuire, who not only wrote "The Great Ziegfeld," but many of Florenz Ziegfeld's greatest Broadway successes, the dramatic theme of "Ziegfeld Girl" is powerful in its blend of drama, comedy and romance. The story traces the rise of the three feminine stars, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr and Lana Turner, from obscurity to reigning beauties of the Follies; their subsequent loves and problems and their solution of these problems.

In addition to the five stars are such favorites as Jackie Cooper, Ian Hunter, Charles Winninger, Edward Everett Horton, Philip Dorn, Paul Kelly, Eve Arden, Dan Dailey, Jr., Al Shean, Fay Holden, Felix Bressart and Rose Hobart. "Ziegfeld Girl" is a type of production that Ziegfeld himself might have dreamed of. It surpasses in cast, in beauty, in melody, anything ever offered by the screen.

YOUTH IN CAMP

Reports from all parts of the nation indicate that there is an unprecedented number of boys and girls in summer camps. This is the best of news for the boys and girls, their fathers and mothers, and for the future of the country. This is evidence that young people are not being deprived of one of the most important of all of life's assets—a knowledge of the outdoors and a love of its wonders.

This great army of youngsters, whose everyday lives are lived, for the most part, remote from the great masterpieces of nature, are going into the hearts of the woods, or along the shores of a river or a crystal clear lake and they are learning how to sail a boat, handle a canoe, to recognize a maple and an oak and a pine, to identify birds and fish and the denizens of the woods and to fathom many of the other secrets of the outdoors.

And when, their two or three weeks in a tent or a cabin ended, they return home brown, strong and self-reliant they possess greatly increased potentialities of good citizenship. These camps, which are universally conducted by those who are cognizant of their responsibilities and their opportunities for the development of robust and clean-minded young men and women, are vital assets to the nation's life.

GIGANTIC PROGRAM

That request of nearly $10,000,000 for the United States Army alone during the next fiscal year not only will stir the public to a clearer realization of the costs involved in preparedness but to a better understanding of the broad scale of Uncle Sam's military set up.

There was an initial blueprint of an Army of fewer than 2,000,000 men, with a guess that it might perhaps be expanded to 4,000,000 in case of belligerent involvement in the war. In the meantime the amateur militarists were saying that what the country wants is not a big Army but a small one of great striking power. Apparently what the nation will have is a big Army of great striking power.

In the last war the Army grew to more than 4,000,000 men, but it was not completely mechanized. Much of the machinery and ordnance were supplied by the Allies. This time America is building toward a completely integrated machine, stronger than any the world has ever known.

Add to that the most powerful Navy and the most powerful Air Force, all within the possibility of accomplishment by the world's leading industrial nation, and it adds up to a military program capable of meeting any threat to the Western Hemisphere.

Troops are called to end strikes, 95 per cent of all aluminum is going into defense work, mimeographs are placed on the priority list, and Uncle Sam shows signs generally of having developed a single-track mind.

Easterners may be asked to discontinue driving their autos for pleasure because of inadequate oil transportation facilities. Most drivers thought congested highways had taken the pleasure out of driving years ago.

Going bareheaded may be hard on the hair, as an expert contends, but it's positively ruinous to the hat business.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

"Let us stay engaged, at least until Cannes. One day more—you cannot mind that. It would look so strange to break our engagement overnight. What will Mr. Norheim say?"

"What has Felix Norheim got to do with it?" Marie tried not to sound impatient. She had mistaken weakness in Nino for tenderness. "I don't believe in pretending anything," she said, in her forthright manner. Perhaps she was being hard. "I'll tell Norheim, if you want," she went on. "Of course, I'll take all the blame. It's my fault."

The Marchese bent toward her, his teeth remarkably white against the greenish tinge of his cheeks. "I understand many things," he said slowly. "It is Tony Worth who has come between us. But I shall not let you go." He smiled only with his lips, took her hand and bowed over it. Then, abruptly he left her.

Marie sank into the basket chair facing the Serenade's wake which frothed in lines of foam. The day lingered, warm and delicious, on the long skirts of twilight. But Marie felt somehow spiritually profaned. Nino had been vindictive—dragging Tony in. It was more than unporting; it was vindictive with almost the stab of a threat. And Felix Norheim. What business of his was it whether she married Marchese Nino Lippi or not?

Thank Heaven they'd be in Cannes by tomorrow, Marie thought with a sense of increasing uneasiness. She wouldn't stay long in Cannes. She wanted to go home. She wanted to be among her friends again; lunching at the Colony, dancing at the Stork. No end of places to enjoy. . . . She closed her eyes, and found herself imagining Tony in the foreground of all the familiar scenes her mind evoked.

She opened her eyes to find him standing, gazing down at her. "Did I wake you?" he asked. His face looked drawn, haggard, as if he had not rested.

"I wasn't asleep," she noticed, as if for the first time, how strong were the lines of that face, the chin dogged, the mouth sensitive, and the eyes a gray that could change from smokiness to tempered steel.

Tony took a chair beside her, swung his legs across the arm. He had carefully thought over what he meant to say, and just how far he could go in sounding her plans for the wedding which must not take place. "I want to apologize for not minding my own business last night," he began. "When I advised you not to marry Lippi in a hurry, I took a great deal on myself. I suppose you'll do it anyway?"

Her color mounted. "I'm not going to marry him at all, I've just broken my engagement."

"What?" Tony bounded to his feet in such obvious consternation that Marie's flush deepened, and she sat straight in her chair. "You mean you've told him it's all off?" Mixed up with his dismay was another more profound emotion.

Marie rose, her head high, her breath coming faster. "I thought you'd be glad," she said, in a stifled voice.

"Gosh! I didn't mean —" he floundered. But she walked rapidly away before he could finish.

He couldn't have explained anyway, Tony thought, wretchedly. He couldn't tell her that an open break with Nino Lippi while they were still on the yacht was the one thing to avoid. Her protection had lain in the apparent success of Norheim's plans for her. Now there would be other and desperate moves afoot. It surely meant that Tony Worth couldn't move on his own, until she was safely on shore.

Felix Norheim was busy. He sat in the office room of his suite, fussing importantly over papers. The drawers of one of his cabinets were open. He had pulled out the Schuyler dossier, and it was pleasant reading. He moistened his thick, protruding lip; the sycarite within forestalling more luxuries that would soon be his. He didn't intend to pour all those millions into the channels of his agency. But tomorrow, when he met Friedrich Haensel and Sergei Vorodkin in Cannes, he would

Lord Beaverbrook Asks Help of Radio Technicians of U. S.
London, June 18.—In a trans-Atlantic broadcast, Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of State, appealed today to American radio technicians, both professional and amateur, to help man Britain's radio locators—new secret weapons to combat air raiders.

The address marked the first official request for American power to assist in the defense of Britain in the struggle which Lord Beaverbrook termed the "battle for the future of the world."

The Minister of State explained that radio and electrical technicians are in growing demand to support Britain's air defenses.

Simultaneously the Air Ministry revealed hundreds of the radio locators are already in use and that thousands are being produced, for which operators must be found.

"The war has brought a new science into existence," Beaverbrook said. "It is the science of radio. It is in radio that we find the way to spread the covering wings of science over the multitudes who inhabit our cities."

"It is radio that destroys enemy airplanes. It is radio that finds the enemy in the darkness, seeks him out through the clouds, sends the avenging fighter plane where it may meet the lurking bomber and bring him to destruction."

Tea at Buckingham Honors
Member of Soroptimist Club

Honoring Miss Elizabeth Lamb, principal of Doylestown high school, a tea took place at the home of Mrs. Ralph Ashton, near Buckingham, on Sunday afternoon, given by members of Doylestown Soroptimist Club. The affair was also in the form of a farewell party, Miss Lamb having retired from the teaching profession, effective at the end of this term.

Miss Lamb, until her resignation from the club, was a director of the organization. She plans to return to her home in Baltimore, Md. As a farewell gift she received a Soroptimist Club pin, an orchid and roses.

Tea was poured by Miss Helaine Lindeman, president; and Miss Leonore S. Berton, a former president of the club.

(By the Rev. James R. Gaffey, Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church)

O Lord Jesus Christ, Who didst enter into Jerusalem, there to die; enter into our hearts, we beseech Thee, and subdue them wholly to Thyself. And as Thy faithful disciples blessed Thy coming and spread their garments in the way, covering it with palm branches, make us ready to lay at Thy feet all that we have and are, and to bless Thee, O Thou Who comest in the Name of the Lord. Grant that after having confessed and worshipped Thee upon earth, we may be among the number of those who shall hail Thee eternal triumph, and bear in their hands the palms of victory, when every knee shall bow before Thee, and every tongue confess Thee Lord. mance to film-goers. It is scheduled to be screened from the widely read novel by Bess Streeter Aldrich.

The stormy love affair of a night club entertainer and a studious professor is the theme of the story, the acting of which takes place in a sleepy little college town, in whose dignified atmosphere the heroine is astonished to find herself.

Stewart, as the young pedagogue, marries Miss Rogers, the entertainer, after a brief whirlwind courtship in New York City, and takes her back to Old Sharon. Fearing the stern tongue of his Puritanical father, who is also the president of the college, the boy hesitates to tell his family of the marriage.

LEGION JR. NINE TO OPEN SEASON HERE ON ST. ANN'S FIELD

Bristol Team To Meet Perkasio in First Game of Season

ASK PUBLIC'S SUPPORT
Legion Team A Fast One This Year, and Expects To Win

Tonight on St. Ann's baseball field the Legion Junior Team of the Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, will open the season with the strong Perkasio nine which were champions of last year's league.

The line-up of the Bristol team will be Yates or Chichillitti, 3b; Baurath, 2b; Tazik, ss; Devoe, 1b; Boccardo, 1r; Acemrdi, cf; McCole, rf; Capriotti, c; and Rotondo, p; Fleming, c; DeLiso, infield; and Hems, outfield.

Coach Henry Morgan has high hopes for the Legion team and with the support of the fans he thinks that a strong team composed of nearly the entire high school team of Bristol, reinforced by Bensalem's star battery of Devoe and Fleming, will win the crown.

Saturday's game with Doylestown was postponed on account of wet grounds and will be played at a latter date.

Fans are asked to support the game tonight and root for Bristol because Perkasio will have at least 100 rooters, that follow their teams.

Athletic Officer Hems has worked hard to give Bristol boys an opportunity to play good baseball in a recognized league, covering the entire state. The American Legion sponsor this program to help boys to be good citizens.

In its Junior baseball program athletic officer Robert J. Hems reported to the post that of the 93 boys that he has handled through their program not one boy has been arrested for any offense.

EDGELY WINS FINAL 3-MATCH TOURNAMENT

Despite the roar of thunder that echoed the reports of the shotguns and the lightning to reflect the flashes of the twelve-bores, the shooters in the Bristol - Edgely - Newportville Trap Tournament stuck to their guns on Sunday in the final match of the tournament.

The final outcome of the three-match tournament gave the Edgely Rod and Gun Club first place with a wide margin of 127 targets over Bristol and 181 over Newportville.

Honors for high gun for the day were shared by A. Kirk, M. Heckler and J. Kish, each breaking 47 out of 50 clays for Edgely. George Bruden smashed 44 for Bristol and J. H. Vansant 42 for Newportville. High man for the three shoots was A. Kirk, the well known Edgely shooter, breaking 141 birds out of 150, with Joseph Kish, of Edgely, runner up with 139.

The cloudburst that occurred late in the afternoon soaked many of the shooters but failed to dampen their spirits as some dashed for the club house, while others waited in their cars for the storm to abate. The match was finished in good time after the storm was over.

The winning Edgely team is comprised of the following shooters: A. Kirk, J. Kish, M. Heckler, G. Bintliff, J. King, W. Quinn, H. Pitman, G. Cook, Gyles, H. Bintliff, J. A. Rigby.

The scores for the final match which was held on Sunday at the Newportville Club Grounds were as follows:

For the Edgely Rod & Gun Club—Rugby, 33; Kirk, 47; Pitman, 34; Heckler, 47; King, 43; Quinn, 45; H. Bintliff, 36; G. Bintliff, 46; Stalcup, 32; Kish, 47; Clawges, 31; Gyles, 39.

For the Bristol Fish and Game Protective Association—Scheffey, 35; Yorty, Sr., 30; Mullen, 36; Lynn, 39; Delker, 36; Cameron, 30; Nonini, 34; Cattan, 25; Bruden, 44; Johnson, 24; Bossler, 36; McDevitt, 30; N. Rubino, 30; J. Rubino, 32; Yorty, Jr., 28.

For the Newportville Rod and Gun Club—J. H. Vansant, 42; C. Vansant, 36; W. Snyder, 41; Stevens, 36; Brodich, 32; Leuschel, 40; Lucas, 31; Sullivan, 25; Mende, 31; Miller, 35; Muth, 23; Winder, 25; Groner, 29; Mortimer, 26; Hartman, 35.

The trap committees of the three clubs greatly appreciate the interest and fine sportsmanship shown by members of their clubs in the Tri-Club Shoot and are looking forward to the next tournament to start in September.

GAMES RAINED OUT TO BE PLAYED TONIGHT

Last evening's rain caused the postponement of the two scheduled games of the Bristol Suburban League. The Badenhausen-Rohm and Haas game did not get started while the Voltz-Texaco team had a 3-0 lead on the Fleetwings nine when the game was called.

Two tilts are carded for this evening. On Leedom's field, Voltz meets the Auto Boys while on the Maple Beach diamond, Edgely and Rohm & Haas will battle it out for first place.

President Paul Voltz last night announced that the Edgely-Voltz-Texaco game of last week will be played on Landreth's field tomorrow night while the postponed Rohm & Haas-St. Ann's game is scheduled for Friday evening.

If you have a house to rent, advertise it in The Courier.

their view had not the remainder of the crew and passengers of the Robin Moor been rescued. The fact that no lives were lost naturally diminishes American resentment and detracts from the force of what we otherwise would have said, but it does not fundamentally change our position. Even had the thirty and more survivors not reached Cape Town, our action still would have been confined to a protest, a warning and a demand for indemnity.

HAD there been the loss of life which at first seemed likely, protest, warning and demand all would have been hotter and stronger, though no more final. The reasons are clear: First, the sinking occurred nearly a month ago. The elapsed time and the day-after-day publicity permitted the story to grow too stale to really inflame the American people. Second, to rush the country into a "shooting war" on the basis of one such "incident" would seem to justify the accusation that Mr. Roosevelt is anxious and eager to get us into the war; and is only waiting for the first excuse.

THAT, of course, would be an indefensible position for the President to occupy. It is absolutely vital that he, or any other President, seem reluctant to take this nation into war. The President must seem to have no honorable alternative if he is to have the people solidly behind him. He must not seem to desire war. Everybody recognizes these things as true. When the patience of Woodrow Wilson in the face of many incidents was recalled, and even when it appeared that American lives had been lost, thoughtful men never believed the Robin Moor sinking would be used by President Roosevelt to do what so many of his friends have been urging him to do.

NOW that the rescue is complete, the chances of utilizing the "incident" as the excuse for full naval participation upon the side of the British are much more remote. This is as gratifying to some as it is disappointing to others. However, there is no use blinking the fact that the Robin Moor moved us a little closer to war than we were before. And the closing of the consulates takes us closer still. It is conceivable, although not likely, that the German reply to the consulate closing may edge us over. But that is not the feeling of those with the clearest view and the most accurate recollection of the events twenty-five years ago when Count Bernsdorff was given his passports. What is anticipated is that if another sinking "incident" occurs it will be much more serious, in that it then will be in defiance of solemn governmental warning to Germany as to the consequences.

WARNINGS of a certain kind, when disregarded, almost make action imperative. In the meantime, we have "frozen" all Axis funds in this country, and the Axis nations have retaliated with the obvious move of seizing ours. Under the circumstances, it is growing more difficult all the time to maintain diplomatic relations. Once severed, there would be but one step to take. It is interesting, however, that there are an increasing number of people in the Administration who think that step never will be taken—that not even fuller naval participation will force us to it; that complete rupture of diplomatic relations will not force it; that Mr. Roosevelt, while helping the British to the limit, is determined to keep us officially out of war. But that will not prevent us from actually being in it up to our necks. We pretty nearly are now as almost anyone may see. It is an incongruous and conflicting attitude, but not more so than some others this Administration has taken.

Swarms of RAF Bombers Hammer French Coast

Channel—some at terrific altitudes while others barely skimmed over the surface of the water.

On the opposite shoreline German anti-aircraft guns put up a terrific barrage of fire.

But in the early hours of the evening before darkness set in, we could see the British bombers go directly toward their objectives and launch their bombs.

It was believed that German fighting planes also went into action but they were not visible to spectators on the cliffs here.
